'Poor' Family Paintings Are Worth Millions

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—A Chicago art appraiser today hailed a set of paintings dug out from under an immigrant's bed and a closet as "the greatest art find of the century." He said they're worth 8 to 10 million dollars.

Some art authorities weren't so sure. They said they'd like to see the works for themselves. Alexander Zlatoff-Mirsky, art

Some Colleges Object to Loyalty Oaths

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Many colleges are protesting a loyalty oath required of needy college students seeking Federal loans to help pay for their education.

Some other colleges are supporting the loyalty oath. Some are participating only because they feel their withdrawal from the program would penalize deserving students.

Yale President A. Whitney Griswold termed the affidavit "contrary to the classic principles of our colleges and universities."

Harvard President Nathan M. Pusey called it an "affidavit of misbelief."

Both Yale and Harvard are among those schools dropping out of the program in protest against the affidavit.

Princeton University refused to participate at the outset of the program because, said President Robert F. Goheen, the loyalty oath provision "offers no protection whatever against those who would abuse our heritage of freedom and of law."

Columbia University has formally expressed opposition to the affidavit but participates in the program because "many Columbia students need the help that this act may bring to them."

Other schools are opposed to the program for different reasons. The loyalty oath is required by the National Defense Act of 1950, which put the student loan fund into operation.

Required is an affidavit stating the student does not belong to, believe in or support any organization that believes or teaches the overthrow of the U.S. government by force or violence—or by any illegal or unconstitutional means.

The student borrower also must swear an oath to uphold the U.S. constitution.

An effort to knock out the affidavit was made last summer in the U.S. Senate, but it failed.

Last week, the 93-member Association of Land Grant Colleges and State Institutions told Congress in a resolution that opposition to the affidavit was growing throughout the nation.

New Volcano Cone Born in Hawaii

By HENRY HARTZENBUSCH
HONOLULU (AP)—A new volcano cone was born today as mighty Kilauea volcano spewed tons of glowing, molten lava and steaming rock 1,000 feet into the air from a week-old fiery vent.

The cone, half-moon in shape, began to rise around a 150-foot fissure in the southern wall of Kilauea Iki crater. It began to take shape after seven days of eruption flowed an estimated 10 million cubic yards of lava down the crater's gentle inner slope in he received help while a contestant on the former "Twenty-One" quiz program over NBC.

Garroway said the "Today" program had been attacked as defeatist in some quarters because his remarks had been recorded on video tape the afternoon before the program was aired.

"We have been accused of defeat. Our integrity has been attacked. I feel I must answer directly now. When I'm accused of dishonesty I feel I must answer," said Garroway.

"This program is taped. The words I'm speaking now were recorded 14½ hours ago. I thought everybody understood this. Apparently that is not the case."

Garroway went on to say that it was decided some months ago to record in advance the portion of the program seen in all time zones. Otherwise, he said, people on the West Coast would have to get up at 4 a. m. to see it, since it begins at 7 a. m. in New York.

"There has been no secret about all this taping, no secret whatsoever. It was given all the publicity our press department could give it."

"When Van Doren was suspended, our studio was besieged by reporters. None came in the morning, they came in the afternoon," said Garroway.

However, he asserted, that "when I broke down when I was telling about Charles, newspapers suddenly found out I was on tape."

TRIPLET CALVES—Bernard Kittredge, 5, and Erna Polle examine triplet Holstein calves in Weatherford, VI. Twins in bovine families are unusual. Triplets are rare. Unfortunately for the calves, multiple birth animals are of little use for milking purposes and they'll be sold for their meat only.

'ROUND AND 'ROUND WE GO—Even though Jack Norris is a field representative of the Plume Society, this steer distrusts his motives in St. Louis, Mo. Norris chases the runaway steer around a pillar in an apartment parking garage. The animal had gotten away from a packing company. Its spirited escape try ended in a trip to the slaughterhouse.

DOROTHY DIX

What to Do For Daughter, Unmarried and Pregnant?

Dear Dorothy Dix:
I need help desperately. It's for my daughter. I want to know where there are homes for unwed mothers.—Frankie

Dear Frankie: My heart goes out to you and your daughter. But your plight, desperate though it may seem, is not unusual and can prove a blessing in disguise if faced with courage.

If your extremely you may feel that your only answer to your daughter's pregnancy is refuge in a home for unwed mothers. No such institution, however fine, can be a substitute for a mother's love. I appreciate your frantic desire to get the poor child out of town, away from the questioning eyes of neighbors. Perhaps you lack the money to pay for her confinement or you may have an unconscious urge, which would not be unusual to punish her for what seems to you wrong doing.

Not knowing all the facts (your letter is very brief) I cannot tell. But this I do know: If she were my daughter, I would take her in my arms, kiss away her tears and say, "Keep your chin up, darling. We'll see this through together."

Now, for the practical side. How old is your daughter? Does she have the father of this child? Does he love her? Is he free to marry her? If not can he support her and their baby? Can you? Do you love her?

If, after letting your heart answer these questions, you still want to put your daughter in a home for unwed mothers, write me just how much you can pay, if anything, and I will forward a list.

Dear Dorothy Dix:
I am worried about my sister. She has lost interest in everything. She is 17, going to school. She wanted to become a teacher but has lost interest in school and church, never wants to get dressed up, put on lipstick, or go any place. Is there anything to be done about her?—P.S.

Dear P.S.: It is unnatural for a girl of 17 to sit at home and mope. Undoubtedly some real or sister is your relationship with her close? Has she talked things out with you in the past? If so, put the question to her point blank: What's wrong? However, if she is not in the habit of confiding in you, such a course would do more harm than good. The alternative would be to show by your affectionate interest that you care what happens to her.

Draw her into the conversation at table. Include her in your plans. Then perhaps she'll open up and, by talking out her troubles, give you the opportunity to advise her.

Dear Dorothy Dix:
I'm 15 and in grade 10. Although no beauty queen, I'm fairly good looking. My brother teases me about not having a boyfriend and my mother thinks I'm afraid of boys. I've tried to act confident and witty like my girl friend but I simply cannot. Boys think I'm boring and dull. I'm beginning to think I have no boy-girl feelings in me and wonder whether I ever will. Thus, I'm already wondering about the possibility of becoming an old maid.

Dear Bewildered Girl: I believe every girl should have an interest in life, entirely apart from marriage. Find out what you like to do best in life. Type, sing, paint, play the piano, swim, write, etc. No matter what it is—and do it with proficiency—comes confidence. A confident girl is self-assured, poised, and attractive. Interesting to others. Try a bit of self-improvement and see the difference. The best of boys line up in front of your door.

Send Dorothy Dix: I am 15 and my boy friend is 16. We have known each other

Chapter XXX

Sara looked at Adalgiza, who was pretending to straighten the dresser, though her eyes were on Sara in the mirror. "It is from the Senhora Pontes, mother of the Senhora Manoel. She translated the message into Portuguese."

Adalgiza's face lighted up. "Will we go, senhora?" "I don't think so," she should have said. No. Just no. At that instant it came to her that there was something she had to do. "I'd like to talk to Emilia Pinto. Do you think she would come to see me?"

"Possibly," came the words, slowly, not in Adalgiza's usual enthusiastic manner. "But, senhora, I do not understand. The Senhora Pontes has made the invitation, and that is all that matters."

"I wish to talk to Emilia," Adalgiza said. "I will take care of it, senhora," Adalgiza's prim little mouth was disappearing.

Adalgiza called a friend who knew a maid in the Pinto household; they discussed the weather, gossiped a bit, and finally Adalgiza explained that the Senhora Volinger wished to invite the Senhora Emilia for lunch or cocktails.

"It is like this," she said when she hung up. "The Senhora will not invite the Senhora until it is known that she will accept." Sara tried to read. What would she say to Emilia? What would she reach the stage at which an important confidence might be asked?

Adalgiza hurried to the phone on the first tinkle. It was Peter Thorpe.

"You did a great job on Pontes, Mrs. Volinger. You really broke him down."

Sara gasped. But that way, it sounded terrible. "But I'm not satisfied with the report, Mr. Thorpe. Not at all."

"Not satisfied? What are you talking about? Why, it settles everything. Pontes signed a statement admitting he rigged up wires that could have shorted and that he knows there couldn't have been more than a hundred or so pounds of rubber on the premises at the time the fire broke out."

"Mr. Thorpe, Senora Pontes is not certain," she stressed carefully. "That his wires caused it. The reports mentioned dynamite."

"Sure," Thorpe interrupted with a laugh. "Probably the five set by the short touched off some of the dynamite that had been lying around."

So the case was closed. Yet nobody was sure the solution was in the right one. Nobody but Peter Thorpe, who knew least about it.

Finally Adalgiza's friend called back. The Senhora would accept for cocktails but would leave at 6:30. (Join her parents for dinner.)

At five Emilia came.

Sara and Emilia sipped Vinho Verde, which Adalgiza had learned was Emilia's favorite predilection drink. They discussed unimportant things.

Parting glances at the clock told Sara that 6:30 was less than half an hour away. Emilia suddenly asked, "Excuse me, Senhora Volinger, may I make a call?" Standing before she finished the question, Emilia reached for the telephone.

"Of course, I'll leave," she said. "No, stay. If my maid should come in, take the receiver as if you are calling."

Sara nodded. Emilia dialed, then looked at her wrist watch. "He must be at home. He must be," she said to herself. She glanced at Sara, and then spoke into the mouthpiece. "The Senhora de Faria."

She peered toward the kitchen door a second and then her face broke into a big smile.

"Guaro, it is your sweetheart," she smiled. "You did not come last night. Wait, don't make excuses. She shook her head. "Listen to me, I have only a minute. Father is seeing a man tonight. I have talked to the padre, and you and I can arrange it. Then father will give us his blessing. Yes, he will. I know."

Sara, too, knew the man Emilia meant.

"It is tonight or not at all. At nine, I will never slip out again if you are not there tonight."

She slammed the receiver and sat down. "But of course, I will see him," she said to Sara. "Is Belem your home now, Senhora Volinger?"

Here at last was the moment for confidences. "Not for long, Emilia. Won't you please call me Sara?"

"All yes, Sara," Emilia answered, looking at her watch. Then she leaned toward Sara. "Senhora, do you love Guaro de Faria?"

"Do I love Guaro? No, Emilia. I thought I would never be able to ask you. And I was so afraid that you might say yes. But he is no more to you than a friend, no?"

"No, no, he is no more," Sara wanted to laugh.

"He loves me," Emilia went on in a low voice, "but he will not believe that my father would forgive us and set him up in business if we were married without his consent." She looked down at the handkerchief she was twisting. "You can't change your heart to suit your father's requirements."

Emilia tossed her head again and went to the door.

Alone in the room now, Sara looked down at her empty hands. How could she try to shatter a youthful love?

UN Force Is Still Guarding the Sinai

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign Editor

On a lonely sand spit near the tip of the Sinai Peninsula, a special United Nations force stands guard three years after Britain, France and Israel invaded Egypt.

The place is called Sharm-El-Sheikh, and from its shorelines coastal guns once barred Israeli shipping from the narrow Gulf of Aqaba.

The Israeli wrecked the guns in the invasion of 1956 and the other wise deserted observation post now is occupied by small contingents of Norwegian and Danish troops.

They and their fellows are symbols of a religious and territorial conflict which has kept the Middle East in a state of uneasiness since 1949 and at times, such as in 1956, has contained the seeds of a war involving all the great world powers.

To Separate Forces
It was three years ago this month that the United Nations General Assembly voted to set up UNEF (United Nations Expeditionary Force) to "separate" the forces of Israel and Egypt. It was not to engage in combat.

This force is a little more than 3,000 strong. It occupies the Gaza Strip, a 26-mile finger of land jutting into Israel along the Mediterranean Coast, and is strung out along the Negev from Rafah to Aqaba along the Israeli-UAR frontier.

Represented are forces from India, Canada, Yugoslavia, Sweden, Brazil, Norway and Denmark.

UNEF comes to attention in this dispatch, not because of a three-year anniversary but because the question of U. N. forces at Sharm-El-Sheikh has been brought up again by a spokesman for King Saud of Saudi Arabia.

Wants Troops Withdrawn
The king, according to his spokesman, believes the troops should be withdrawn.

King Saud expressed the prevalent Arab view that the Gulf of Aqaba is composed of Arab waters. With U. N. troops at its entrance, Israel is able to use the gulf freely for shipping originating at the port of Elath at the head of the gulf into the Red Sea.

The problem is made the more complicated because it also involves the question of Israeli rights to use the Suez Canal and Arab claims against Israel-held Palestine.

The forgotten men of UNEF apparently have a life-time job. The Arab states exist, and apparently will continue to exist, tens of thousands of refugees, the Gaza Strip and neither the Arabs nor the Jews show signs of yielding.

problem.
In a speech at the first Arkansas Conference on Planning, Renewal and Housing, Kinney said it's sometimes difficult to sell the public on the economic advantages in downtown redevelopment.

Kinney, an attorney, described some other problems faced by planners. The buildings involved in renewal projects may be tied up in real estate litigation, or of other types, he said.

He said that Forrest City had been working on a renewal survey program for six months. When persons interested in bringing industry to Forrest City make inspection trips, he said, they learn that the greatest single problem is the central business district.

Thanksgiving Day

Does Thanksgiving Day classify you on the platter level or on the prayer level? Will this day leave you with a singing soul, or only a stuffed stomach? Which day is it with you... Turkey Day or Thanksgiving Day? The "founding fathers" declared it a day of Thanksgiving to God. Then in all our supplication, may our much more abundant occasion for Thanksgiving make us even more humble. With Thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God (Phil. 4:6). A-MEN.
